Vienna, July 23, N. S.

ON the 19th in the Evening an Expreſs arrived from the Imperial Army, with Advice that the Turks, who the Night between the 9th and 10th had precipitately abandoned their Camp before Orſova, returned thither on the 13th with a Reinforcement of Troops which they had met in their Retreat; that entring their Camp unexpectedly, they cut to pieces ſome Troops of Huſſars of the Regiments of Caroli and Spleni, who had been ſent into it to ſecure the Baggage and Artillery which the Enemy had left behind them; and then having ſeized all the Poſts, they retook the greateſt Part of the ſaid Baggage and Artillery, which the Imperialiſts had not had Time to remove into Orſova. The Return of the Turks was ſo ſudden, that they had like to have intercepted two Battallions which had been ſent to relieve the Garriſon of Orſova; and other Troops who would have left the Place were obliged to remain there. Count Furſtemberg General of the Artillery of the Empire, and Major General Bauffe chief Engineer, who had repaired thither to view the Fortifications of the Place, were obliged to ſtay in it; but Prince Charles of Lorrain, who had accompanied them thither, had the good Fortune to get out juſt before the Approach of the Turks, and to rejoin the Army. On the 21ſt Inſtant arrived here Major General Count Preiſing, with the agreeable News, that the Turks having on the 15th attacked Part of the Imperial Army beyond Meadia, had been repulſed with great Loſs; the Subſtance of the Account he brought is as follows, viz. The 10th of July, after the Great Duke of Tuſcany had received Advice of the raiſing of the Siege of Orſova, it was thought fit to let the Troops have ſome Reſt, for which Purpoſe the Army encamped upon advantageous Ground on this Side of Meadia, where they lay all that Day and the next, but on the 12th they put themſelves on the March to approach Orſova. The 13th they had Advice, that the Body of Turks which had beſieged Orſova, and had retired to Sladova, were met there by a Reinforcement of 20000 Men which had been ſent by the Grand Vizier, and that he was coming thither in Perſon; hereupon it was reſolved that the Army ſhould return to the Camp on this Side of Meadia, the rather becauſe it was known there was no Forage to be had in the Neighbourhood of Orſova, ſo that it was impracticable to lead the Cavalry that Way; accordingly the heavy Baggage being ſent away on the 14th, the Army began their March on the 15th at Three in the Morning. Count Preiſing was left to bring up the Rear Guard with the Regiments of Kevenhuller and Hohenzollern. Field Marſhal Count Phillippi was poſted at ſome Diſtance from thence with the Regiments of Dragoons of Phillippi, Savoy and Lichtenſtein, and that of Curiaſſiers of John Palfi, in order to cover the March of the Infantry, who had very difficult narrow Paſſes or Defilez to go through. At Meadia the great Duke viewed the two Forts there, put a Captain with 100 Men into the leſſer Fort, and Colonel Bernklau with 650 Men into the greater. The Army arrived at Length in their old Camp: The Tents were hardly begun to be ſet up, when Count Preiſing gave Intelligence that the Enemy appeared in great Numbers, and ſeem'd to deſign to attack us: Upon this Felt Marſhal Phillippi moved with his four Regiments of Cavalry to come nearer to the Army, and drew up in order of Battle within 1000 Paces of the great Fort. Count Preiſing retired at the ſame Time in good Order and joyned the Felt Marſhal. In the mean while the Turks who advanced with Expedition, attack'd with great Fury the little Fort of Meadia, which they carried after ſome Reſiſtance, and cut in Pieces the Garriſon that was in it; but the Colonel of the Regiment of Francis of Lorrain haſtening thither with ſix Companies of Grenadiers, drove them out of the Fort. The Turks endeavoured three ſeveral Times to retake that Fort: They made ſurprizing Attempts for that purpoſe, leaping into the Ditches, and and climbing over one another to reach the Parapet, but were each Time beat off with conſiderable Loſs. The Turks ſeeing they could not win that Fort, fell with great Vigour upon the ſix Regiments of Cavalry commanded by Felt Marſhal Phillippi: He received them with the utmoſt Bravery, and repulſed them in ſeveral Attacks they made upon him: And General Neuperg, who was neareſt to him, coming ſpeedily to his Aſſiſtance with two Brigades of Foot and ſome Companies of Grenadiers, the Turks were ſoon broken and put to Flight; they were purſued as far as the Defilez, where many of them were killed. According to the Report of Priſoners, the Number of the Turks was between 30 and 40000 Men; they were commanded by three Baſhaws of three Horſe Tails, and the Seraskiers of Widdin and Niſſa. The Loſs of the Imperialiſts is of near 1200 Men killed or wounded; but that of the Turks is much more conſiderable, for above 3000 of them were found as well before the Fort of Meadia, as in the Fields after their Retreat. We took one Horſe Tail, 33 Colours, one of the Janiſſaries Drums, two Pair of Kettle Drums, and a great Booty in Arms and Horſes. The Count de Sonnau Captain of Grenadiers, and Major Grumbkau, were killed, as were alſo the Captain and Lieutenant of the Troop of Grenadiers of the Regiment of Dragoons of Savoy, with almoſt all the Grenadiers of that Troop. Major General Count Charles Palfi, the Colonels Przoffski, and Count Lamberg, and the Count de Solar Lieutenant Colonel, were wounded, as alſo ſeveral Captains and other Officers.
